"PARKING PROBLEM" IN THE BAY?

After a week with no ship traffic, Port Administrator Fred Uhrle reports a potential traffic jam this week.

Yesterday morning the Graziella Zeta arrived for her normal stay of several days. The Sonoma arrived in the early morning hours and was moored to the Standard Oil Dock because the Graziella Zeta was already occupying the main dock.

The Tofua is expected to arrive tomorrow morning. The Thorsgaard is due around noon Friday, and the Daisen Maru has tentatively scheduled her arrival for Friday also.

Uhrle admitted that the unusual number of ships posed some problem in finding docking space for all, but he felt sure that "something can be worked out."

AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT EMPLOYEES TO TAKE COURSES AT EAST-WEST CENTER

Two employees of the Department of Agriculture are scheduled to take courses at the East-West Center in Honolulu.

Maijo Nomura Glenister, main office supervisor for the department, left a week ago to attend a six-month refresher course in business education and office management. Senetenari Porotesano, of Aoloau, a quarantine inspector, will leave late this month to attend a three-month course in animal quarantine techniques and procedures.

John M. Hanlin, TV project coordinator for the Agriculture Department, said Porotesano's enrollment in the quarantine course recognizes the need for more knowledge in American Samoa about animal quarantine procedures.

"Like Hawaii, our islands do not at present have rabies that could be introduced by pet dogs and cats; nor do we have hoof and mouth disease, nor certain other animal diseases. Quarantine officers need training of a practical type that will enable them to make thorough inspections of imported poultry, game birds, game animals, domestic animals such as dogs and cats, cattle, horses and other animals, and inspections of such exported items as animal hides.

This training program in animal quarantine procedures will provide a means of meeting the need for more knowledge about this important subject. It is based on the concept of on-the-job training.

"The participants will be assigned to work at the State of Hawaii Animal Quarantine Station in Honolulu and will get experience also in the inspection of incoming planes and ships. Staff members of the Inspection and Quarantine Branch of the State of Hawaii Department of Agriculture, Division of Animal Industry, will serve as resource persons, teachers and/or trainers."
