Sir Charles MacClean, chief scout of the British Commonwealth, is scheduled to arrive in Pago Pago on Sunday morning's Air New Zealand plane as he journeys to Apia. He will return Tuesday and spend the day with American Samoa scouting officials before flying to Honolulu early Wednesday morning.

WASHINGTON -- The Civil Aeronautics Board has approved "common fares" to Hawaii's outer islands for Pan American World Airways, United Air Lines and Northwest Orient Airlines.

VITAL DEFENSE COMMUNICATIONS CENTER TO OPEN IN HAWAII NEXT MONTH

WASHINGTON -- The first of nine defense communications switching centers in the Pacific will be opened next month in Hawaii, the Defense Department announced yesterday.

The center, located at Wahiawa, Oahu, will be part of the department's independent global communications network, through which teletype and computer data are transmitted to U.S. forces. Information on operations, intelligence, supply, inventory, control, personnel, finance and budget will be relayed through the switching center.

RYUKYU ISLANDS CHIEF EXECUTIVE VISITS PRESIDENT JOHNSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Senator Daniel K. Inouye and Representative Spark M. Matsunaga, Hawaii Democrats, accompanied the chief executive of the Ryukyu Islands, Seiho Matsuoka, to the White House yesterday for a brief meeting with President Johnson.

Matsunaga said he served as Matsuoka's interpreter for part of the discussion. The Okinawan leader started out speaking in English but turned to Japanese later and called on Matsunaga to help him.

The Congressman said Matsuoka thanked the president for all the United States has done for Okinawa since the end of World War II, but noted there was some sentiment in the Ryukyus for reversion to Japan.

Matsuoka said further American aid was needed to stabilize the political situation, Matsunaga said. He said the Okinawan leader also felt there was some legitimate basis for complaints that his country's economy had not progressed as fast as possible under U.S. rule.

The President, he added, made no commitment on increasing U.S. financial commitments to the Ryukyus, but indicated he had already instructed White House staff members of study the needs of the area.

TODAY'S THOUGHT FOR THE FUTURE

The assumption that each individual can be happy and successful in only one occupation is erroneous. Most individuals have many talents and interests which would enable them to work in several different occupations with reasonable success and happiness.

FIJI REQUIRES YACHTSMEN TO PROVIDE £100 BOND

Immigration authorities in Fiji now require overseas yachts visiting the colony to place a bond of 100 pounds on arrival. The bond will not be released until the yacht finally leaves Fiji, and may be forfeited if the government has to incur expenditures on repatriating a crew member or for any similar circumstance.

The money can be paid either in cash or in the form of a bank guarantee, or by a person of substance. The sum is 100 pounds irrespective of the size of the yacht or the number of crew on board. A larger sum may be demanded at the discretion of the principal immigration officer if individual circumstances indicate that this is desirable.
